WESTERVILLE TRAGEDY.

A Murderous Assault Made Upon Mayor Andrus.

An Attempt to Kill the Village Marshal to Arrest the Assistant.

Results in the Office Being Shot and Seriously Injured.

A dispatch from Westerville, Monday, gives the following details of a serious shooting affray in that town.

On Saturday night this village was shocked by a tragedy the like of which never before visited it.

The Hessler brothers, who have long been notorious here, came to town in the evening, intending to have a time. Frank Hessler, who was arrested some months since for an assault on the Snow brothers, jumped his bail, and his father, who was his bondsman, was obliged to pay the forfeit. This was Frank's first appearance since that occurrence, and he announced his intention of revenging himself on the Mayor. About ten o'clock he walked up to Mayor Andrus, who was standing in front of his residence, and commenced a violent assault upon him. While he was raining blows upon his victim, he shouted his intention of killing him.

By the interference of bystanders, the Mayor made his escape, and as soon as he recovered his senses, swore out a warrant against Frank Hessler, charging him with assault.

It was intended to kill the Mayor, and it was intended to kill the Mayor, and it was intended to kill the Mayor.
